My Master

This journal was found on one of our controllers. It seems he has lost faith in you. Know that he has been dealt with and will never again speak ill of you or our cause.

-Galzon

We have completed construction of the devices needed to build the clockwork overseers and minions as per the request of the Master. The gargoyles have been most useful and their knowledge of the techniques for the construction of these creatures will serve us well.

I am not one to criticize the Master, but I believe he may have erred in his decision to destroy the wingless ones. Already our forces are weakened by the constant attacks of the humans. Their strength and unquestioning compliance would have made them very useful in the fight against the humans. But the Master felt their presence to be an annoyance and

a distraction to the winged ones. It was not difficult at all
to remove them from this world. But now I fear without more
allies, willing or not, we stand
little chance of defeating the foul
humans from our lands. Perhaps if the Master had shown a little
mercy and foresight
we would not be
in such dire peril.
